PYJAMA DAY AND SENSORY LEARNING

This week, our Prep classrooms enjoyed celebrating Pyjama Day! The children had lots of fun coming to College dressed in their favourite pyjamas, sharing and describing what their pyjamas looked like, and becoming pyjama fashion designers for the day. We also enjoyed playing games and participating in fun activities while dressed in our cozy sleepwear!

Connecting our sound of the week to meaningful, hands-on experiences helps bring learning to life. It allows students to make real-world connections and develop a deeper understanding of the sounds and letters they are learning.

Throughout the year, our Prep students have also been creating their very own Sensory Sound Books. Each week, after practising tracing the letter, students use a different sensory material to create it in their book. These books are a wonderful hands-on resource that we revisit regularly to revise and reinforce the sounds we have learnt. They will also provide a special keepsake and a familiar learning resource for the children to refer to as they transition into Kindergarten.

This week, to celebrate the letter P, the children used colourful pipe cleaners to create the letter, exploring its shape and formation through a fun, tactile experience. It has been wonderful to see their sensory sound books grow each week as they build their early literacy skills through creativity and play!
