A VISIT FROM QUEEN ELIZABETH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL

We welcomed visitors from England.

Last Friday the College hosted teachers and students from the Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School in England (QEGS). QEGS is a selective, co-education, academy status Grammar School and Sixth Form in Alford, Lincolnshire in England. The school was first established in 1566 with the donation of £50 from an Alford merchant making the school over 450 years old. They have visited us on a few occasions and it is always a delight to hear about their way of school life as they in turn experience a bit of the Australian way of school life. The students spent some time in classrooms with Years 9,10 and 11, gave a presentation to our Year 10 students and also enjoyed some Aussie treats like Vegemite and Anzac biscuits.
